

ORIGINAL RAGS
TUESDAY, 13 NOVEMBER

A wonderful evening's music! More and more applause for each piece and at the end. The piano playing was infectious and the trumpet notes reached the rafters (and possibly beyond!). The musicians again praised our wonderful acoustics – they loved it.

The next event in the Concert Series is the 1921 silent film of “The Sheikh” starring Rudolph Valentino, to be shown on the St. Aidan's wide screen on Saturday, 7th November starting at 7.30pm. Music will again be provided by Mr. Donald McKenzie, the organist of The Odeon, Leicester Square, who is making the trip especially for us with the film and score, and to play our organ.

We hope that you will all put this date in your diary – it's one not to be missed. The Christmas Fair is the weekend following, so there will be no clash!

For some time, there has been a falling off in attendances at our concerts. We cannot afford any more financial losses and are asking for everyone's help in spreading the good news to family, friends and neighbours. After all, it is one of the forms of outreach that we can all easily do. If you can suggest ways of publicising the concerts (and services, too), then please see the usual people – they will only be too happy to consider anything! Methods, venues, designs – whatever!

There must be more people who would love to hear LIVE music in St. George – somewhere!
